PUBLIC
SÉNAT
CHAÎNE D'INFORMATION POLITIQUE

Tuesday 15 July 2008

Public Sénat 24/7 available for the first time on television on Freebox TV from July 16th

Following the launch of its 24/7 channel on the Internet in January 2008, Public Sénat continues its development strategy and includes the TV offering on Free's ADSL for a broadcast of its programming on Channel 91.

From 16 July, Free internet users will thus be able to access all Public Sénat's programmes non-stop, in real time and monitor in particular, the biggest events live and uninterrupted.

"Public Sénat, the political information channel is one of the rare television channels to broadcast in full and live on the Internet. I am delighted at the arrival of Public Sénat 24/7, on the Freebox TV ADSL offer, which establishes an additional step towards the full channel that we all wish for", emphasised Jean Pierre Elkabbach, Chairman of Public Sénat.

"We are very pleased to welcome Public Sénat 24/7 on Freebox TV and to thus enable our Free internet users to have full and unlimited access to all the contents of this channel which is entirely dedicated to the work of the Senate as well as political information", stated Maxime Lombardini, Chief Executive Officer of Iliad, parent company of Free.

The ADSL television offer is available subject to a phone line's suitability.
